LO1 Research:

Vibe Productions needs your documentary to be factually correct in order for it to be used online. To ensure this is the case, you will need to complete research from a wide range of sources.

1. Secondary Research – Using the internet and books, research the history of your specialism. What is it? How has it developed? What effect has technology had on it?
  - Videos – find at least 2 videos of people discussing your specialism and discuss what is being said in it
  - Significant pieces of work – are there any productions that were particularly influential in your specialism? Try to find a number of them from old to new
2. Setting up interviews – Would your documentary benefit from interviewing people with specialist knowledge? Try to find people that you could interview in your documentary. What makes them suitable? Is interviewing them a realistic possibility? Not all documentaries will benefit from interviews.
3. Harvard Referencing – Ensure all of your research is Harvard Referenced. This is easiest if you complete it as you work rather than just doing it all at the end. The more references you use, the greater the reliability of research.
